

SOURCE A A Map of British North America, 1866

SOURCE B Divided Colonies

Halifax Acadian Recorder, 1866.

We don't know each other. We have no trade with each other. We have no facilities, or resources, or incentives, to mingle with each other. We are shut off from each other by a wilderness, geographically, commercially, politically and socially. We always cross the United States to shake hands. Our interests are not identical, but the very opposite — they are antagonistic and clashing.